RATIONALE:

Faculty development programs (FDPs) have proven to be successful for improving teaching skills in higher education.

Professional FDPs produce promising outcomes in the learning and teaching practices and recommended that teachers in higher education should attend FDP training activities on regular basis.

Planned FDPs should extend beyond the health professions discipline, to include social skills necessary for collaboration, professional growth as well as management, and leadership abilities.

To instructional development which emphasized the development of faculty skills involving instructional technology, small group teaching, media, courses, and curriculum design

Help in professional development which emphasized the development of individual faculty members in their professional responsibilities as educators, researchers, and administrators

It also help Organizational development which emphasized the requirements, and main concerns of the institution

FDP also help in Career development which emphasized faculty preparation for career advancement

FDP also enhanced the Personal development which stressed on life planning, interpersonal and communication skills of faculty members.
