He started the seminar with some very basic but very essential information on TRAI and other bits of telecommunication. He informed that The Telecom Regulatory Authority of India (TRAI) is a regulatory body set up by the Government of India under section 3 of the Telecom Regulatory Authority of India Act,

1997. It is the regulator of the telecommunications sector in India. It consists of a Chairperson

Disputes Settlement and Appellate Tribunal (TDSAT) to take over the adjudicatory and disputes functions from TRAI.

TRAI's mission is to create and nurture conditions for the growth of telecommunications in India to enable the country to have a leading role in the emerging global information society. One of its main objectives is to provide a fair and transparent environment that promotes a level playing field and facilitates fair competition in the market. TRAI regularly issues orders and directions on various subjects such as tariffs, interconnections, quality of service, Direct to Home (DTH) services and mobile number portability. To increase transparency and give a data-based overview of Indian Telecom Industry at regular intervals, TRAI publishes multiple reports under Release/Publication "Reports" section.

Next he concentrated on the rights and responsibilities of the citizens towards the above mentioned things and how it can be served from time to time.

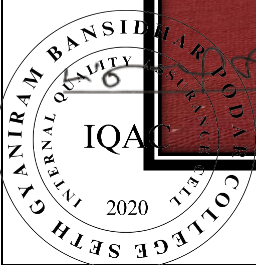

The students attending the seminar were overwhelmed and lucky that they attended the seminar, which provided a lot of information which was rather useful. Students realised and learnt a lot about TRAI, its working, and other essential facts along with the rules and regulations. Not only students but Asst. Professors and who so ever else attended the seminar got a lot of useful information which otherwise was not possible due to time constraints.

All in all it was a very informative and need to know information for every participant and will be of great help in the future and honing awareness skills of different sectors. In the end the Vice-Principal Sir gave a concluding speech briefing about the value and importance of such seminars and thanked the guests and speakers for sparing their valuable time for our college.
